ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORTS BRIEFED.

Republicans Taken at a Disadvantage

The Administration Has Already so Damned Itself that Little is Left to Expose.

Vice-President Stevenson at Streator, Ill.—Gen. Harrison at Indianapolis—Mr. Wilson is "Choked Off."

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Rarely if ever before has there been a ratification meeting of such magnitude in New York as that which assembled in Cooper Union this evening to hear ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed. The demonstration was under the auspices of the regular Republican organization of the city and county of New York. Every corridor and aisle of the hall was crowded by 7:30 o'clock, and the square in front of Cooper Union was filled with people, who were treated to campaign speeches by local orators. Mr. Reed spoke as follows:

"I confess to a sense of unwillingness to come before this great audience here tonight. That unwillingness does not arise from any lack of interest in the cause which concerns us all, for I never felt a deeper interest than now, nor does it arise from my doubt of success, for that seems to be assured. It is because the presentation of any argument by any speaker seems almost entirely unnecessary. The case has argued and is arguing itself so thoroughly in the course of events now taking place, and which have taken place that the eloquence of an orator, if I had it, would surely seem to fall far short of that conviction which has already taken possession of the public mind.

"Mr. Evarts, in one of those brilliant sayings which have so often lighted up a life of dignity and honor, declares that the wisdom of mankind after six thousand years has discovered no better method of administering justice than to set up two men on opposite sides, each charged with the duty of exaggerating the merits of his side and, perhaps, abusing the other.

BURNING GROUND.

Several Hundred Acres Near Horneck, On Fire.
Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

SIOUX CITY (Iowa), Oct. 13.—The earth near the little town of Hornbeck, twenty miles from this city, is burning and an area of 329 acres is covered with from six inches to six feet of ashes. Five years ago this land was the bed of a swamp. It has since been drained, part of it has been under cultivation, while the rest has been used for hay land. The fire was first seen in June and has been burning since. It has failed to extinguish it. At times the fire appears to have gone out, but an investigation shows it to be burning beneath the surface redhot. At other times the fire gives forth great clouds of smoke. An area of about two thousand acres is threatened.

He Was Behind Time.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 13.—An electric car on the Armourdale branch of the elevated railway ran away on the Seventh-street viaduct in Armourdale. A score of passengers were injured. R. W. Mars, C. Hunt, Charles Prill and Conductor O. Stoen were all badly hurt, but it is thought they will recover. Motorman Shock was a few minutes behind time and allowed the car to run down grade at rapid speed.

Patchen's Time.

SIOUX CITY (Iowa), Oct. 13.—This was the last day of the Interstate Fair, and the track was the most popular attraction. The track was made two attempts to lower his record of 2:04. He failed. On the first mile he was very fast, but on the second passed in fast time, but on the home stretch slackened his speed and finished in 2:06. Patchen broke on the last quarter of the second mile, but went under the wire on the third.

THE NEW GRANDSTAND AT THE RACE TRACK.

At 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Capt. J. C. Newton, president of the board of directors of the Agricultural Association, will call out the horses for the first race of the big meeting, and will turn them over to starter, Ben Benjamin. The statement was made some time ago that Los Angeles would this year have the great race meeting of the State and the indications are that this statement will be more than borne out during the week. In fact, many of the horsemen now here predict that the races will be better than any ever held in the State.

From the very inception of the work on this year's fair the directors have let nothing undone to make the meeting one that will reflect credit on Los Angeles. The new library with purse money and as a result, have received the fleetest-footed runners and the fastest light-harriers animals in California.

During the year they have also made provision for the comfort of visitors. Improvements have been made on all the old buildings and the old ramshackle structure that served as a grandstand has been replaced by a magnificent new stand worthy the name. The new structure, which is shown in the accompanying illustration, is an ornament to the grounds. It is 200 feet long and has a seating capacity of 2500. There are forty boxes and a roof promenade. The lower floor is fitted as a restaurant and contains toilet and dressing-rooms. The stand cost over $10,000 and pronounced the handsomest and most elegant stand ever erected west of the Rockies. A feature of its construction that will please race-goers is that a view of the entire homestretch can be had from every seat. This advantage was obtained by building the stand on an angle so that the track may end only ten feet away from the fence. The old stand has been divided and the sections reconstructed into a pool stand and machinery department.

There is a more general interest being manifested in the fair this year than ever before.

The directors have made special rates from all points from Fresno to San Diego and the indications are that the attendance will break all records.

The convention of assessment companies at Boston, under the lead of Mr. Fousé of the Fidelity Mutual of Philadelphia, ordered to be expunged from its records the resolution and all discussion pertaining thereto which declared that agents of older life companies indiscriminately took the business of assessment companies by loading them up with bad risks. The proposition was too preposterous for the convention to accept when it came to seriously consider the matter, hence the action indicated.

The Pennsylvanian, Illinois and Rhode Island insurance departments revoked the license of the Commercial Alliance Life of New York, to do business in their respective States, on receiving intelligence of the action of the New York insurance department. Superintendent of Insurance Pierce has issued a circular in which he notifies the public in the Commercial Alliance of the official action taken in determining the company insolvent, and that they must use their own judgment in regard to paying renewals of premiums.

The National Life Association of Hart-ford has reinaugured the policy-holders of the Mutual Benefit of New York, which recently failed.

Henry J. Raymond, second vice-president of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life, has sent in his resignation to take effect November 1, on account of ill health.

Nicholas Finzer, the head of a great tobacco manufacturing concern at Louisville, Ky., has taken the sum of $100,000 insurance in the Mutual Life. He was born in Switzerland in 1848, came here when 5 years old as an emigrant, and began life's struggle as a poor boy in a tobacco factory at the age of 8 years. He has risen to opulence and owns one of the best breeding farms and most extensive studs in Kentucky.

O. Vincent Coffin, whom the Connecticut Republicans have nominated for Governor, has been president of the Middlesex Mutual Fire Assurance Company of Middletown, since 1884. The candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, Lorin A. Cooke, is one of the receivers of the Continental Life of Hartford.

Art Exhibit.

The art gallery of the Art Association is rapidly getting into order. During the week cases of pictures have been received from R. D. Yelland, San Francisco; Julius Ledovic, W. L. Judson, Mrs. J. C. Fletcher and others. Rev. J. C. Fletcher has loaned the association two fine paintings by a talented young artist of himself, all by eminent Italian artists.

The works of Hy Koch, Mr. MacLeod, Miles King and etchings by Ford have previously been received and partially installed.

The formal opening will be about the 30th, prior to which the work will be on private view a little while before that time.

THE EAST SIDE.

The Altura Tennis Club Champion-ship—New Social Club.

The championship of the Altura Tennis Club was decided yesterday afternoon, Fred Houser defeating Burt Russ by the final score of 12-12. The tournament was begun a week ago, and in the finale Houser and Russ had each won eight games, when time was called on account of darkness. The tie was played off yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large and interested crowd of spectators, the result being as given above. The victor was awarded first prize, a handsome silver challenge medal, while his opponent received the second prize, a pair of fine tennis shoes.

In the absence of Umpire Civille, who officiated at the first day's tournament, Roy Shumway acted as umpire, to the satisfaction of all parties.

A number of the young men of the East Side, with a view of improving upon the order of dancing parties held from time to time, have organized themselves, and under the name of "Archibalds," will soon inaugurate a series of hope to be held one evening each month at Banquet Hall. The club has twenty members, and this will be slightly increased, a maximum limit of thirty having been agreed upon. Good music and strict decorum will be features of the club parties, which are to be strictly amateur.

In fact, the club will be to the East Side what the old Clover Leaf Club was to the city proper, and it is after this latter organization that the new club is principally modeled.

The Laird Company, Boys' Brigade, will hold a competitive drill for a silver medal on next Wednesday evening at the half-back of the Congregational Church. The public in general is extended a cordial invitation to be present and observe the progress made by the boys in the last few months.

David True, rector of the Church of the Epiphany on Stoebel street, will be tendered a reception next Tuesday evening at the residence of Henry Brett, No. 220 South Chestnut street. A choice musical and literary programme will be presented, Mrs. M. Y. de R. Prescott being among the contributors.

A Celestial in Trouble.

Lo Fan is the name of a celestial who conducts a mercantile establishment down in Chinatown. Like any other merchant he has an eye to making good high profits on goods. With this point in view he began selling opium without first obtaining the necessary city license. He had a competitive drill for a silver medal on next Wednesday evening at the half-back of the Congregational Church. The public in general is extended a cordial invitation to be present and observe the progress made by the boys in the last few months.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE

Hearing Complaints Against the Toboggan.

The Matter Before the Finance Committee of the Council Yesterday.

Another Protest Filed in the Matter of the Hill Street Sewer District—At the Courthouse. New Suits.

At the City Hall yesterday the Finance Committee conducted a hearing on the complaint against the toboggan slide. Most of the Councilmen were about the building attending to committee work or looking after political matters.

At the Courthouse the hearing in the Pratt will contest continued, and the usual routine business was transacted.

AT THE CITY HALL.

The Toboggan Slide. HEARING OF THE COMPLAINTS AGAINST THE ENTERPRISE.

The Finance Committee yesterday took up the petition referred to it by the Council, complaining of the toboggan slide on Broadway, between First and Second streets. Parties interested in the matter were present and were given an opportunity to be heard. The committee took the matter under investigation and postponed action till a later date.

Regarding Vertical Handwriting. Superintendent Search was asked by a Times man yesterday regarding the advisability of teaching a system of vertical handwriting in the schools rather than the oblique system, which is almost altogether now taught. He said: "He sees no reason why the vertical method is growing in favor. For business purposes it is to a large extent preferable to the method now taught and there are numerous sanitary reasons why it should be adopted. He thinks, however, it will be better to introduce the system gradually rather than in such a manner as to make it an abrupt innovation."

WANTS A NEW WARRANT.

L. T. Graves writes to the City Council, stating he is the assignee of the contract with H. C. Register for the grading of Sand street, between Broadway and Castelar streets. The assessment warrant, as issued for the work is, through no fault of his defective. He therefore asks that it be set aside and a new warrant issued instead.

CITY HALL NOTES.

F. Shrier has filed a protest against the sidewalk of Sand street, between Philadelphia and Montreal streets. He gives as one of the grounds for the protest a certain alleged defect in the sidewalk.

Warren Gillies and others have filed a protest against the assessment made against property in what is known as the Hill-street sewer district. They claim they are charged for building a sewer, as heretofore published, larger than is needed to accommodate the sewage for that district.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

The Courts. THE PRATT WILL CONTEST—SU-PREME COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Contrary to his usual custom, Judge Clark convened the Probate Court yesterday morning for the purpose of resuming the hearing of the Pratt will contest, but as a matter of accommodation to the jurors, no session was held in the afternoon and the matter went over until Tuesday morning.

Only one more witness was examined for the proponents, as part of the time was consumed in the reading of the deposition of H. H. Fielder, Esq., of San Francisco, who had drawn up the will for the decedent, Mrs. Pratt, in the year 1881. His testimony was to the effect that the document he drew up was similar in its tenor to the proposed will, except that $200,000 was bequeathed to her son, Charles, then alone and single, and $100,000 was devoted to charitable institutions, instead of $10,000.

Louis K. Webb, was then called to the stand, and testified to the effect that he was a brother of Mrs. Charles P. Pratt, and had known Mrs. Anna A. Pratt for twenty years prior to her death. In his opinion her mind was active and clear until she was stricken, with paralysis, in 1883. After showing that he was familiar with the handwriting of the decedent, witness was shown the proposed will and reluctantly pronounced it as having been written by Mrs. Pratt.

An attempt was made upon cross-examination by counsel for the contestants to show that the witness was prejudiced on account of his failure to secure appointment as guardian for the Pratt minors, but beyond the statements of counsel this was not in evidence. He was called, however, subsequently that he was interested in making the proposed will stick, because he expected to receive a part of the $10,000 bequeathed by Mrs. Pratt in it to his deceased sister.

THE SUPREME COURT.

In the Supreme Court yesterday before Chief Justice Beatty and Justices McFarland, Harrison, Garoutte and Fitzgerald, sitting in bank, the following cases were disposed of:

RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

Mr. Alford Talks — He is Greeted by a Small Audience.

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 13.—(Special Correspondence.) There was not much of a turnout last evening to hear W. H. Alford, the Democrat,提名 from this district for Congress. The attendance was in marked contrast with the meeting at the Brunswick Hotel, ran down to where the shot was fired, they found Cuero crawling across the street with a bullet hole through his left breast. About this time a buggy was driven rapidly north to Fifth street, and when some men who were standing two blocks away, in front of the hotel, passing through Dr. Garces' back yard, in a southerly direction.

Cuero was taken down to the City Hall, where he received medical attendance, but at 4 o'clock this morning he died from the effects of his wound. The victim is from San Pasqual, San Diego county. He was born in this city several days ago with his brother and sister and a cousin—a friend of his sister. About 10 o'clock he was seen on South Main street with the two women and a white man, earnestly talking together, and the next heard of him was on West Fourth street, after he had been shot. After being brought to the City Hall, he rallied sufficiently to tell his brother, who had been sent for, that he had been shot by a Mexican, but he could not tell who.

Marshal Dexter gave his position as candidate for Constable on the Republican ticket.

W. H. Huntington Friday evening arrived from San Francisco.

Z. H. Woodman has returned from the singing tour about Tumamoc, and says even our warm October refrigeration weather compared with the present heat of the desert region above ground.

A.P.A. sentiment hereabouts is to be revived next week, when for two evenings an exhibition will be given against the tenets of Romanism.

The tie schooner Alacras arrived at the wharf Thursday evening, and Capt. Dornell's efficient force is making short work of its cargo.

ORANGE COUNTY.ASSASSINATION IN THE SANTA ANA STREETS.

Mariiano Cuero Shot by Unknown Parties — The Poultry Exhibit at the Fair—General News Notes.

SANTA ANA, Oct. 13.—(Special Correspondence.) A murder was committed in this city Friday shortly before midnight. Mariiano Cuero was the victim, and his assassin is, as yet, unknown. The circumstances surrounding the case are peculiar, to say the least, and as the parties to the affair are all believed to be Mexicans, it may be that little or nothing will ever be known of the details of the case. A pistol shot was heard near the corner of Birch and Fourth streets just after 11 o'clock, and when some men who were standing two blocks away, in front of the hotel, passing through Dr. Garces' back yard, in a southerly direction.

POULTRY AT THE FAIR.

The most successful and most interesting feature of our county fair is the poultry department which has received its full share of attention from visitors and buyers. The good show in itself.

Director George B. Bishop is its superintendent, and his large experience and thorough knowledge of such matters have been used to good advantage in the management of this department at the fair.

The entries are probably more complete in the poultry department than in any other department, and the birds are all specimens of the highest excellence in their various lines. It is a well-known fact that we have in Orange county some of the best informed and most successful poultry fanciers in the State, their exhibits having won many awards.

The fair is a great success, and the poultry shows of different counties and cities in Southern California, and this reputation is well sustained by the fine specimens on exhibit this week. No bird is allowed to take first premium who fails to score 37 points according to the latest American standard of perfection.

The stockholders of the Keeley Institute held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon and re-elected the old board of directors, who, in turn, elected the officers now serving.

Rev. H. H. Huntington of Mrs. G. T. Head and Mrs. J. H. Reed of this city are attending the General Association of Congregational Churches of Southern California at Los Angeles.

TOLD IN SMELLS.Perfumery Was One of the

that May Replace Musical Concerts.Smells to Displace Guns—Electrical
Science is Revolutionizing a Forgotten Field in Art.[From a Special Contributor.]
Who has ever attended a smelling concert? How many persons have any idea what a smelling concert is?

To begin with "smelling concert" can hardly be termed a happy combination of words. However accurate it be as a description of a totally new and highly original form of public entertainment, there is no euphony in the term and it decidedly inferior to those which terminate the nerves of any of the other senses. The delicate mucous membrane in the upper part of the nasal cavity is just as capable of exquisite refinement as are the papillae upon the tongue which have been catered to since time began. The five senses comprising the nervous system are all connected with and controlled by a common center, the brain. That marvelous membrane, the retina of the eye, which so wonderfully appreciates both intensity and color, all ages have attempted to satisfy, as well as to offer the most harmonious vibrations to the "membrana tympani," connecting with the auditory nerves. All the senses have utilitarian functions to perform, but aside from these each can be made to contribute in a greater or less degree to man's enjoyment.

"A mere glance at the human head," he continued, "will show that the nose is the most prominent feature of the face, and the beautiful spray-like filaments that are the termination of the nerve of smell, are more prominent than those of either the eye, ear or tongue. Think of the money that has been spent—that little nerve of sight. All the art galleries of all the ages are to credit, yet it is responsible likewise for all the honors you have experienced. Think of all the music that has been created for smells and what not makes up a bouquet, it will not merely be in harmony with respect to color, but will also harmonize with respect to smell—no flower must be present that would correspond to a false note in a musical chord."

"But will there not be some difficulty in popularizing this new form of enjoyment? Will it not be reserved for a favored few?"

"By no means. It is a very inexpensive form of enjoyment, and as a matter of hygiene our large cities will in time have their great smelling halls precisely as they now possess vast public libraries. When this heretofore slight sense begins to receive the attention due it, a demand will have been created for 'all that is sweet to smell.' The world is bountifully supplied with substances that are odoriferous, and in this way destined to ameliorate life's woes. The animal and vegetable kingdom abound with products which are either in the form of natural perfumery or can be converted into it. Thus perfumes are obtained from all stages of growth of the vegetable kingdom; cedar, the wood; cinnamon, the bark; thyme, the leaves, rose, orange blossoms and so on ad infinitum. Besides these, the gum resins or balsams exude from the trees and myrrh from the shrub. Musk is a good example of perfume from the animal kingdom and toilet powders, sachets and the like are chemical compounds. The perfume trade you can thus see, is destined soon to expand enormously."

"Has the idea ever been brought forward before in the history of the world?"

"It is very probable," replied the young experimenter, "judging from ancient and Biblical history, that perfumery is one of the lost arts, and was much further advanced among the ancient Chinese and Egyptians than it is today, but in the near future we will stand pre-eminently above all ages. We shall then be delighted by a symphony for each sense, but we will also have a symphony of all the senses. Then our theaters will be provided with a network of pipes similar to gas pipes under the floor, with a jet or nozzle for each seat so that when a scene depicted upon the stage is located in a southern pine forest, the realism is made more complete because each person in the audience actually enjoys a whiff of the healthful balsam. The perfumes will be produced and distributed by the burning of smokeless powders behind the scenes and forcing their fumes through the pipes by means of electric fans, blowers or bellows. Exhausters will gently remove the fumes in time for the next number on the programme or scene of the play."

Mr. Moore illustrates his theories by means of a most ingenious smelling cabinet which is to all intents and purposes like a musical box. He can play an aria in perfume. Once his ideas have become popularized we may expect a revolution in many forms of public amusement.

VENTILATE THE ROOMS.

Pure Air Necessary in Every Sleeping Apartment.

A writer in the Jenness Miller Monthly gives valuable suggestions on the subject of ventilation. She declares that it is wise to protect ourselves from the rain that falls by day, but says it doesn't follow that by doing so it is wise to exclude from our dwellings all pure air and breathe that which is impure. If air that is confined and breathed and re-breathed during the day becomes foul and unhealthy, by what process does that which is confined and breathed and re-breathed during the night become pure and healthful?

"For the past fifteen years," says the writer referred to, "I have slept summer and winter—except on a few occasions when it was impossible to do so—with at least one window of my bedroom wide open every night, and have enjoyed excellent health, but on the exceptional nights I always awoke with a headache or a feeling of suffocation. I conclude, therefore, that as much nonsense is indulged in about the malign influence of night air and the malaria said to lurk therein as upon any other given subject. A freer admission of night air to badly ventilated bedrooms would destroy many of the illusions that exist in regard to its unhealthfulness."

Reform in the ventilation of our houses, our churches and our public buildings is needed as greatly as reform in any other direction, and this reform should begin in our houses and should work outward into all our churches and public buildings. If wives and mothers and house-makers generally can be induced to let light and air into their parlors and bedrooms their husbands and sons will soon banish foul air from our churches and public buildings. Women are largely responsible for poorly-ventilated buildings of all descriptions. A great many people frequently congregate in halls and churches, etc., where the atmosphere, unless the windows are kept wide open, is about as malodorous as that of a charnel house, yet they do not consider such an atmosphere too foul for human beings to breathe. It is the first duty of every wife and mother to see that her house is thoroughly ventilated day and night. It is a fact beyond question that the parlors of a large proportion of houses are so close and stuffy that breathing is painful. Nine-tenths of the bedrooms retain the personality of people who occupy the apartments from time to time, it clings to the bedding, curtains, and carpets, and has been closely shut in lest fresh air and sunshine should find admittance; and with their purifying presence carry damage to the furniture.

As the son of the American Minister was one of our party, we saw rooms that are not generally open to travelers. The superb appointments of these defy description. One jewel box was inlaid in monograms and other insignia, with the choicest diamonds.

I saw the room in which Queen Sophia, the first wife of the late king, died. The Bible was marked in the place where it was open when her hour of death came.

With all this wealth and glory, the prospect is that the disposal of the affections of her heart will not be given to Queen Wilhelmina as her undisputed right.

The most humble peasant in the kingdom is, in that particular, richer than she.

Already diplomatic arrangements, as I understand, are being undertaken for the disposal of her hand in marriage when she has come to her majority. There is quite a plain-looking edifice, to which Queen Emma, the Queen Regent now, will be obliged to retire as the Queen Dowager then.

Queen Emma is most highly esteemed; but the love seems to be all centered on their child, Queen Wilhelmina. Her picture adorns the postage stamp, the coin, the windows, and above all her sweetness of disposition remains unalloyed by all this unprecedented adulation in the life of any child of this present era. She is now with her mother at Lustwick Palace.

As a picture, contrast makes attractiveness. I went from the palace of the Queen to the fisherman's village, near Scheveningen. The words of Kingsley, "Men must work and women must weep, for the harbor bar be moaning," do not seem to be applicable here. I saw nothing but thrifit and cleanliness. All Holland is lacks delicacy. But the man to whom credit for all this is due, young D. McFarlan Moore, whose recent discoveries in electrical science are attracting general attention, considers the matter from another point of view.

"Almost everybody with refined tastes and feelings meets this idea at first as though it suggested something repulsive," said he. "Second thought, however, soon banishes such impressions, and it becomes evident that we have until now been enjoying but four-fifths of this life, since there are five senses. Most people consider their noses as subjects of sensations of no agreeable order as a rule. Yet there is no reason why man should not reap just as bountiful a harvest of enjoyment from his sense of smell as from any other of his senses—that of hearing, for instance. Imagine for a moment the difference between the popular idea now associated with the olfactory organ and the idea that is destined to be associated with it in the near future. Now I know from personal observation that nine people out of every ten to whom you suggest such a thing as a smelling concert will, without a moment's hesitation, give utterance to some thought inspired by a recollection of all the vile odors that have ever assailed them. In the near future all this will be changed and the mind will be as enchanted by the prospect of a symphony in scents as by a duet of Patti's."

Mr. Moore was asked if anything like a series of smelling concerts be now in contemplation.

"Only as a scientific study," he replied. "It is true that these entertainments are just now conducted privately as experiments. But that will soon cease to be the case, particularly as it will before long be possible for a man to invite his friends to his house and there entertain them for hours with a series of exquisite and entrancing odors. Instead of musicals we shall read in the social chronicles of the day about scent symphonies at the palaces of our millionaires."

"Will all classes derive equal enjoyment from the innovation?"

"Most assuredly. It does not require the same technical knowledge to appreciate an agreeable smell as it does to enjoy a musical masterpiece. But one good effect of the new form of entertainment will be the education of the popular taste in this matter of smell. The great trouble, nowadays, you know, is that certain well-meaning swains saturate their garments with cheap perfume to the regret of all endowed with superior olfactory perception. Everyone ought to be aware that the filaments of this same olfactory nerve are in no way successful that he can turn on and off again after scale of perfumes and even play a concert in them. One of his most wonderful effects is the history of Rome related in a series of smells. part there are no windows fronting the street, and the few which exist for the purpose of ventilation are completely masked by casements and lattice work. The roofs are terraced or rise in domes, and the apartments receive their light from interior courts, which in the large houses form cool and airy galleries, and sometimes are turned into gardens, where the household spend their leisure time. The principal apartments are in the upper story, the lower being occupied by lumber rooms, kitchens, stables, cisterns and offices. The houses are mostly built of stone, and the doorways occupy both sides of the street, which runs under a succession of arches, barely high enough to permit an equestrian to pass under them. The city is divided into four quarters: that of the Moslems' on the northeast, the Jewish quarter on the southeast, the Armenian quarter on the southwest, and the Christian quarter on the northwest.

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher, the greatest relic-shrine of the Christian world, is situated almost in the heart of the northwestern part of the city.

The approach to it from every direction is through arched vaulted lanes, and small houses generally filled with ragged Arab women, the venders of "vegetables and fruit. After many crooked turnings I arrived in the large square court in front of the church. Here the scene exhibited, in the height of the Pilgrim season, is of the most extraordinary character and appearance. On the upper raised steps are tables spread with coffee and refreshments throughout the court are seated peddlers, and the Bethlehemite vendors of holy merchandise, such as crosses, beads, rosaries and amulets, and mother-of-pearl shells, which are generally hung from the Red Sea, and which are sold at a high price. Through these wares hundreds of pilgrims pass and repass; Pilgrims of many nations in their different costumes: Latin, Armenian, Russian, Greek and Coptic friars, with Turkish and Arab soldiers, all forming the most extraordinary scene that could be imagined. In any one's pocket, and a polyglot language is heard throughout other places in the world could exhibit.

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher is in reality not so much a single church as a cluster of churches and chapels. The key of the church is kept by the governor of the city, and the keys of the other doors by the priest. Entering the church I found myself in a large apartment, forming a sort of vestibule; on the left, in a recess in the wall, is a large divan, cushioned and carpeted, where the Turkish doorkeeper is usually sitting, with half his friends, smoking and coffee-drinking.

Directly in front of the entrance is the "Stone of Unction," which is said to mark the spot where our Lord's body was laid and anointed, after having been taken from the cross. It is a slab of flesh-colored marble, about 8 feet long and 5 feet broad.

Wax candles of colors, size and a number of crystal and silver lamps spread their light over the sacred spot.

This is the first object that arrests the pilgrims, and here they prostrate themselves in succession, the old and the young, women and children, the rich and the poor, and kiss the stone.

In the Pilgrim season there is always a great crowd about this marble slab, and very often I saw pilgrims rubbing handkerchiefs and other articles upon it, which they carry away with them, and preserve with great veneration for times of sickness or death. Many bring their shrines to consecrate them to the same stone.

On the way from the "Stone of Unction" to the rotunda is an iron circular railing, having within a lamp, and marking the spot where Mary and her companions stood to witness the anointing. I entered the rotunda between two of the eighteen pillars, the sunburst, a column above and a dome of imposing appearance and effect, with a large circular opening in the center for the admission of air and light.

Directly before this opening is the sepulcher, within a white marble structure, about 25 feet long, 12 feet broad and 12 feet high. The facade of this building is gorgeously decorated with lamps of gold and silver, wax candles, pictures, artificial flowers, etc. Three enormous wax candles, about fifteen high, stand on either side of the entrance. This structure is divided into three compartments—the Chapel of the Sepulcher and an ante-room called the Chapel of the Angel. Here is shown the stone which the angel rolled away from the door of the sepulcher on the morning of the resurrection. From the Chapel of the Angel I passed into the nave, and now ran directly into the Chapel of the Sepulcher, the largest of the holy places. It is about 6 feet square, and has only room for three or four people at a time.

The sepulcher is a modern marble sarcophagus, somewhat resembling a common bath-tub, with a thin plate of material. The interior of this chapel is extremely beautiful in the soft light of forty-three magnificent gold and silver lamps, hung from chains and shining through red, yellow, green and pink glasses, the colors marking the seats to which the lamps belong. There are four for the Roman Catholics, Greeks and Armenians, and four for the Copts. These lamps are burning without cessation night and day. The south wall of this chapel is adorned with a very fine painting, representing "The Resurrection of Christ." Directly east of the entrance to the Holy Sepulcher is the Greek church or Catholicon, by far the most magnificently adorned of the walls of that immense edifice. It is nearly 120 feet long from east to west, and about half as wide, and is adorned with gildings and paintings; while from the vaulted roof hang numberless costly lamps, dials and other ecclesiastical ornaments. On the right hand is the Patriarchal throne. At the east end is the high altar, reached by four steps, and divided by a richly gilt screen. Passing through the aisle which surrounds the Catholicon on the east I arrived at the long flight of stairs leading down to Helene's tomb, a massive structure of stone, an edifice, crowned by a dome with windows to admit the light. In front of the stairs is the altar, and on the right a seat on which the Empress Helena sat while search was made for the cross. Descending again from the steps I came into the dark, damp and gloomy chapel of the "Invention of the Cross." A marble slab, having on it the figure of the cross, marks the place where the true cross lay. On reascending into the body of the church and approaching the vestibule through which I first entered, I found near Calvary on my left. This is composed of nine small staves, each of eighteen steps, which brought me to the chapel of the cross, the place where Christ was crucified. The chapel is about fifteen feet square, paved with marble and mosaic, and hung on all sides with silken tapestry and lamps dimly burning. At the extreme altar, and under the altar a circular silver plate with a hole in the center, indicating the spot in which rested the step of the cross.

The following morning I obtained admission to the body of the church and approaching the vestibule through which I first entered, I found near Calvary on my left. This is composed of nine small staves, each of eighteen steps, which brought me to the chapel of the cross, the place where Christ was crucified. The chapel is about fifteen feet square, paved with marble and mosaic, and hung on all sides with silken tapestry and lamps dimly burning. At the extreme altar, and under the altar a circular silver plate with a hole in the center, indicating the spot in which rested the step of the cross.

Behind the altar stand three crosses, with the figures of Christ and the two thieves. Close by is shown the clef in the rock, where the earth did quake, and the jewel of the crown of thorns, which was placed on the ground. And beneath the cross is the Chapel of Adam, containing the tombs of Godfrey and Baldwin. During Easter week the Church of the Holy Sepulcher presented almost every day another spectacle. On the day before Palm Sunday, His Holiness, the Greek patriarch, and His Grace, the Roman Catholic patriarch, held their solemn entry into the church.

The following morning, before sunrise, "Consecration of Palms" took place.

"When we entered the rotunda of the church, we saw the Roman Catholic patriarch seated on a bench near the entrance to the Holy Sepulcher, consecrating an immense banner of palm branches, which were afterward distributed to the people. The ceremonies ended with a grand procession, in which the pilgrims and the entire participation.

On Holy Thursday the Latins celebrated a grand mass at the door of the Holy Sepulcher, after which the patriarch washed the feet of twelve venerable pilgrims, in commemoration of the feet-washing of the apostles by Christ, after the observance of the Last Supper. This ceremony was solemn and impressive.

Good Friday morning I attended a grand mass upon Golgotha, which affected me very much. In the afternoon I went to a procession of pilgrims through "Via Dolorosa," or Way of Suffering, where we stopped at each of the "stations" along its course. The "Via Dolorosa" is said to be the street through which Christ walked on his way to Golgotha.

That evening I visited the "Waiting Place" of the Jews on the western wall of Moriah, which is regarded as having belonged to the ancient temple. To reach this place I had to walk through the Jewish quarter or Haret El Yehud, which is the most wretched and filthy quarter of the city. The Jews of Sakhrah, who are Moslems and Jews as one of the most sacred spots on the face of the earth. Under the Holy Rock is a cave which derives a peculiar sanctity from having been successively, according to Mahomedan tradition, the praying place of Abraham, David and Solomon. At the center of this chamber is a great slab of marble, which on being stamped upon, gives a hollow sound; the Moslems call this the "Well of Souls," and believe that the souls of believers descend there after death. The legend is that Mohammed, in his midnight visit to heaven, first lighted on this rock, from which he continued his journey, whereupon the rock raised itself to follow, and was prevented by the angel Gabriel; it therefore remained suspended in the air.

About 500 feet from the Sakhrah, in the southwest part of the enclosure, is the mosque El Aksa. Its form is that of a basilica of seven aisles. Every July is said to have built the Aksa in honor of the Virgin. El Aksa is regarded by the Moslems with more respect, perhaps than the Dome of the Rock. It takes the name El Aksa—the Remotest—to distinguish it from the other holy places as Mecca and Medina. The Haram or Sheriff of Jerusalem is the most important place in the world. It is also the most sacred place of the Christians, Jews and Mahomedans. The Christians recognize it in the place where our Lord walked out and in, where He taught and where He died. His triumphal entry the day before His crucifixion. The Jews, who are not allowed to look with reverence upon the Mount of Olives after the side of their ancient temple. The Moslems turn their eyes toward El Khuda, as it is their greatest sanctuary after Mecca and Medina. According to the forty-sixth chapter of the Koran, on the Day of Judgment, the "Kaaba" of Mecca will be thrown to the ground. It is the most sacred place of the Christians, Jews and Mahomedans.

The Christians recognize it in the place where our Lord walked out and in, where He taught and where He died. His triumphal entry the day before His crucifixion.

SENATOR PERKINS.

That was a large and very solid meeting of citizens and voters which United States Senator George C. Perkins addressed at Armory Hall last night. There was the closest attention on the part of the audience, and frequent and genuine outbursts of applause greeted the telling points made by the distinguished speaker. Senator Perkins traversed the tariff question, touched upon the money and Chinese questions, and portrayed eloquently the immortal achievements of the Republican party in peace and in war. He exposed the perfidy, inconsistency and weakness of the Democratic Congress which overthrew the McKinley tariff law, and denounced the flagrant dishonesty involved in the open breach of faith which was shown by the Democratic law-makers when the beet-sugar bounty, once guaranteed by statute to American farmers, was repealed.

A synopsis of the Senator's forcible speech appears in other columns this morning and a fuller stenographic report will be printed tomorrow.

THE PROPOSED IMPROVEMENT BONDS.

The City Council has agreed to submit to the voters the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $500,000, having passed an ordinance of intention as the first step in that direction, and it is announced that the question will be brought to an issue as soon as possible. The aggregate amount is made up as follows: For enlarging and improving Westlake Park, $25,000; for East Side Park, $25,000; for Elysian Park, $100,000. Total for parks, $150,000. For public-school extension, including the purchase of new sites, erection of buildings and enlarging of existing ones, $185,000; for the purchase of land on Providence ranch for the commencement (headworks) of a water-supply system, $30,000, and for a tunnel through the West Third-street hill, $141,600.

The money proposed to be used for the parks will be of great benefit to the city, if wisely expended, and we believe that citizens will vote these bonds.

That there is a crying demand for more school facilities cannot be denied. The city has grown so rapidly that the present school buildings are entirely inadequate, and many children are debarred from the privileges to which they are entitled; or at least are only able to put in half-time at school. The proposition for a manual-training school, for which provision is made in these bonds, is also an excellent one, in line with the latest and best educational developments. There is, however, an important "if" to be considered in connection with this question. It is not too much to say that the reputation of the present school board—of a majority of that body—is not entirely like that of Caesar's wife. We may safely go further and state that the great mass of the citizens have no confidence whatever in the integrity or ability of a majority of the board, and that they will never vote bonds for the expenditure of so large an amount of money as long as there is a chance that the present board may have the handling of it. The statement has been made that the present board would not have time to make contracts after the bonds shall have been voted. As a matter of fact, the bonds could be voted within about a month from date, and there is apparently a very decided intention to rush them through as soon as possible.

DEMOCRACY AND DEPRESSION.

The speech of Hon. Marriott Brosius of Pennsylvania in the House of Representatives on August 13, while the tariff bill was pending, was a decided novelty in its way. Like the late Silas Wegg, Mr. Brosius frequently "dropped into poetry"; in fact, the major portion of his speech consisted of metrical comments, original or selected, on the depression brought about by the Democratic menace of free trade. Some of these jingles were decidedly to the point. Mr. Brosius's soaring muse first addressed itself, very appropriately, to the Chicago platform, as follows:

I was once a joyous platform; in Chicago

The people laughed and hollered and the bands all came and played;

My planks were joined so neatly that the carpenters declared

'Twas a case of clear perfection, and they'd lick the man who dared

Insinuate that I was anything but staunch and good.

Gone into deep oblivion; laid high upon the shelf. Patriotic speeches, you're back number like myself. They said they made me strong enough to cope with any fate, And yet I proved as fragile as a chunk of armor plate. To patriotic fires I'd give some splinters, But now there ain't enough of me for campaign kindling wood.

"The real situation," said Mr. Brosius, "is not happily depicted in poetic numbers by the cuckoos themselves in the following chorus:

In stress and travail we waited For a tariff for revenue.

When we got it we were belated. We found that it didn't come true.

'Twas rank and foul with protection, A loathsome and horrible pill;

But as cuckoos in lowly subjection, We must love it—so pass the bill!

For years through red ink waves we waded.

'Gainst protection, a sin and a shame; We have howled till our lungs were abraded.

We have kicked till our shanklets were lame.

We've drubbed the drum, blown on the trumpet.

Chicago Robbery down dale and up hill,

But now no dove tells us to jump it. For his tariff—so pass the bill!

The consequences of the revolution of 1892 were graphically portrayed in "the glowing imagery of an awakened genius conscious of the cause, the evil, and the remedy as well," thus:

From forges where no fires burn, From mills where wheels no longer turn, From looms o'er which no shuttles leap, From merchant's shops—which sheriffs keep;

From banks gone up, from stocks gone down;

From God-made country, man-made town, From Wall-street men, from sons of toll, From the bronzed tillers of the soil, From North, from South, from East, from West;

Business is crying with a zest—

'Don't monkey with the tariff.'

Another inspired muse, in three glowing stanzas, recounts the results of "swiping the tariff." The diction may not be entirely classical, but there is no doubt as to the sense: "What's all the bloom'in' racket?" said Grover-on-parade.

'They's shut the bloody mill down,' the horny-handed said.

'Why you's gonna stop the mill down?' said Grover-on-parade.

'All on account of you, old man, and your bloom'in' old free trade.'

And Grover he looked weary, the horny-handed he looked mad, And the Congresslooked tired, and the Brahmins looked glad,

And the Capital looked solemn, and affairs looked very bad.

After swiping the tariff at election.

'Wat's all the bloom'in' racket?' said Grover-on-parade.

'We're sellin' wool for 18 cents,' the steady farmer said.

'The way you's bringin' more than that?' said Grover-on-parade.

'Cause it'll be on the free list when you've given us free trade.'

And Grover he looked sorrowful, and the farmer he looked beat.

For he was gonna lose only 50 cents for 60 pounds of wheat.

And he swore he'd kick himself if he'd another pair of feet.

For swiping the tariff at election.

'Wat's all the bloom'in' racket?' said Grover-on-parade.

'Where are the people rushin' to?' said Grover-on-parade.

'They's gonna stop the savin' bank,' the banker sadly said.

'Wat are they rushin' there for?' said Grover-on-parade.

'To take their money and salt it down before you bring free trade.'

And Grover he looked puzzled, and the banker he looked blue.

And every man he took to his home knew he was bustin' the mills that widespread depression, the mills that

SMART SHAPES.

NEW HATS AND BONNETS DESIGNED FOR THE SEASON.

Some French Eccentricities of Fashion, With Many Costly Novelties That May Be Copied at Home.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(Special Correspondence.) Big hats have come to town, before the dogs begin to bark; let it be distinctly understood that not one of them is for the playhouse. They are, says Mme. Mode, with her foot well down, for carriage, church, promenade—any social functions—alone; so let the woman break this solemn law who dares.

Among the most unique and becoming of the large shapes yet shown was one that looked as if it might just have stepped down from a Reynolds picture; in fact, pictures often seem to clearly express the order of the day, and many and varied are the suggestions they give.

The brim of this hat, which was wide and almost without a curve, was a skeletal structure of wire and black net, with they are such precious luxuries, but any one of them abounds in valuable hints for the nimble fingers of the home milliner.

NOVELTIES.

Brims, even of felt hats, are not necessarily of the same color as the crown; thus, a yellow crown may own a black brim, or else the crown may be entirely of velvet flowers, and the rim of felt. A charming Félix Conlin, fashioned in this way, had a brim of wavy-bronze felt and a crown of blue-velvet roses while the brim was a white wavy hat of pigeon-gray felt and black wings had, curiously enough, a black-silk brim. Huge white-lace bows ornament black hats, and, in some cases, low crowns are made to look high with bands of silk or satin ribbons.

The best of pointed hats, however, for a becoming and useful walking hat could be taken from the one showing the two views in the group drawing.

It was designed especially for a moon-faced Southern beauty, and was of bronze-fet braid, mirror velvet of the same shade and black wings. NINA FITCH.

NEW PARISIAN TOILETS.

Worn by the Actress Miss Elsie de Wolf in "The Bauble Shop."

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(Special Correspondence.) Parisian fashions today are dresses worn by Miss de Wolf, which has a flaring, gored skirt, perfectly plain, of salmon-pink satin. The under side of the satin is as yellow as gold, but although the yellow warp is not permitted to stamp its individuality very strongly upon the pink wool, nevertheless the pink surface shimmers.

A visiting toilet.

mers in every ray of light with a faint golden flush. The silk manufacturers this season have wrested the last color secret from gems and skies.

The bodice is in white chiffon, just covering the bust in a narrow line back and front. The shoulders are two crushed straps of apple-green velvet. This velvet, which, by artificial light, is softened to look almost blue, forms the elbow sleeves to look like large puffs, and the wrinkled center. Old-yellow lace forms deep paulalettes over the sleeves.

The opera wrap, designed to wear with this gown, is an exquisite creation of violet velvet, shot with green and lined with ivory satin. The shape is circular, reaching to the wrist in front and at the back, and is made comfortable by the arms. The shape and an interesting make the wrap sit all around in very smart style. A beautiful old-lace scarf, in ivory tints, is draped about the collar, forming a short cape, and jabot falls down the front where each corner is ornamented with a choice rose of velvet ribbon and long ends. A rosette of the velvet is set also on each edge of the collar to drape the lace. The entire lower portion of the cape is wrought by hand in yellow, repeating the pattern of the lace above.

Felix, who is the best fitter known to the fashionable world, Worth does not believe in fitting his models in the former dress. He also created the carriage dress worn by Miss de Wolf in another act.

This is a beautiful model of the latest new wrinkle for having the skirt and sleeves of one color and the bodice of another. Silver-gray Sicilian silk for the skirt, and the sleeves, also the pointed girle and cape collar. The trimming is embroidery in silver, done by hand on the silk, tiny spangles being introduced in the embroidery to heighten the effect.

The bodice is of white chiffon, and the dress is a vision of refined elegance. BELLARMINE WHITNEY.

DRESS DESIGNERS.

The Possibilities of a Good Business Opening for a Clever Artist.

[From a Special Contributor.]

"It is surprising," said the head of a prominent French star actress in the modern drama, "that there are so few women designers of American modes to be introduced by American actresses? It looks so. The majority of them now order their toilets from the world's leading artists in dress, and American taste has so impressed its exclusive elegance upon the designers of femininity's finest feathers they plume themselves upon the beauty and the originality of the creations they make for American women."

One of the most elegantly dressed women on the American stage today is Miss Elsie de Wolf, New York's society actress and one of the few stars of the "Gaiety" and the "Four Hundred," who have added the grace of their gentle birth and breeding to the stage, and keep up their affiliations with the Brahmin set.

A trio of toilets that Miss de Wolf wears in "The Bauble Shop" keep her audience in a murmur of admiration. They are especially successful apart from their intrinsic style and beauty, because they suggest the refinement of a lady of fashion.

A small roll of bright leaf green as a border edge.

The crown, high and stiff, and looking more like a French bonbon box than any other, is made entirely of velvet.

The same color in a rich ribbon velvet repeated itself in a wide Alsatia bow at the left front, and fastening behind this was a high tuft of loosely waved black ostrich feathers.

Another definitely picturesque freak, fashioned after this model, had its small, steep, powder-box crown made of blushing apple velvet, which, with its delicate streaks of yellow and crimson, closely imitates that fruit. A charming addition in the way of hair is a wide band of gold-colored strings that were added to this, and instead of the net a full moon of jetted lace, cunningly wired, formed the brim. The sole outside trimming, a bunch of black feathers as large almost as a small bush, was fastened immediately in front, with a square jet buckle.

MILLINERY ECCENTRICITIES.

But if those two hats have a reason for being, by virtue alone of their becoming qualities, how to account for the next fantaisie? It was as curious and ugly as some strange, weird flower, one of the unnameable mushrooms that sometimes come to us from Paris; and the mere sight of it recalls a certain inconsistency for which the French are famed. Fathers and mothers of all fashions at least the best and the worst of them, they nevertheless present openly, and with no mincing of manners, any new whim of La Mode that seems merely bizarre.

The first flower bonnet went down the steps of Paris for by the hands of the most eminent and even some foreign fashions are stoned on by the passers-by; and one of our own countrywomen, Miss Viola Roseboro, the clever magazine writer, tells somewhere, that she was once so amazed in Paris by remarks on her headgear—which happened to be a darning little stocking cap—that she put it under her arm and walked home bareheaded and respected.

And now, with the memory of all this in mind, this hat!

THE LATEST FRENCH CONFECTION.

Picture a monster disc, straight and flat as the ogre's plate in the fairy tale, of deep, gold-colored felt.

Put in front, on this vast, untrammelled expanse, a single low bow of black velvet, whose wide, stiff ends touch the edge of the brim at each side. Under this brim, as if growing out of the temples, fasten two large balls of white ribbon.

Mist, from the two crown sides, underneath hang two black ostrich feathers that curl around the coiffure and droop to the shoulders, and lo, the latest French freak that offends the American palate!

In this large hat the temple ornaments were distinctly out of place, but for small and absurd reasons, and the effect was becoming garniture. Indeed, the very latest fad in millinery is a broadening effect at the sides, and, to emphasize this, not only balls and jeweled horns of every description are used, but also velvet choux and seal and sable heads.

SMALL BONNETS.

A tiny saucer bonnet of flame-pink crepe, folded like a peony, has an entire brim of baby-seal heads, with two larger ones encircling the sides. Another, a minute triangle of scarlet felt braid, suggesting something like a skull cap, and from the center of the flat crown rose two shadowy curly wings of black gauze, starred with gold.

Looped through the brim around the front and sides, was a long scarf of white lace, and, for a short, head-dress, tied in front and neck together like large beads; horns, was a pair of silver ornaments, richly set with red stones.

FOR THE THEATER.

Another infinitesimal toque of turquoise velvet, wrapped over wires, had as only trimming a cluster of tiny cut wings at each temple.

These bonnets are confidentially known to be worn in the theater, but since a license is a bon-vivant's mark, and—may be, alas!—one only hope the pinch may never come.

Everything else considered, if all one only knew it, there is no hat or cap, earth or sea, becoming as well as this.

Made empties from her horn an infinite variety in color and shape. Creoles where she gets them all, were designed for princesses.

and family in her own drawing-room, and nothing of the over-accentuation of fashion that crowds a toilet over the line separating good taste from bad.

A dinner dress, and extremely well-made form a morning walk, collected in light blue Sicilienne silk. It is not of the new blue (cornflower blue) that is destined to be hopelessly common, but a clear pale sky blue. The skirt is a marvel of fulness, yards and yards wide around the bottom, and yet has not an extra inch of material around the waist save at the bust.

Cut a circle from tissue paper. Make a hole in the center, and fit it upon a doll. This will give you the effect so far as the pattern of the skirt goes.

About the foot of the skirt, which is so full it falls out toward the bottom into overhanging and overlapping folds, there are flights of butterflies in black, little ones and large ones mounting nearly to the knees, and then falling back to one or two. These recherche decorations are not embroidered or appliqued on the silk, but are printed in it.

The silk under each pattern is of lace and exquisite workmanship, is cut away to show the white silk petticoat beneath.

The bodice is also circular in shape with more fulness over the bust and between the shoulders than at the neck. It is made whole in front and fastens down the left shoulder around the arm and under it to the waist. There are two of these.

One is of lovely lilac purple velvet, of the shade of a pansy petal, and there is a crushed stock collar to match this coiffure, which is finished off at the left of the waist with some careless loops, and a cluster of velvet panpies. The second is of black velvet, and this is tied into a jaunty upstanding bow at the back, and falls in two long narrow sash ends on the skirt. There is a flight of butterflies about the shoulders, and one perches prettily on the inner edge of each sleeve. The sleeves are single balloons-like puffs, as she will, she's bound to come down.

The very large retail firms that make a specialty of ready-made gowns and bodices are not best pleased when they are kaleidoscopic in their rapid changes.

Again, prominent modistes are willing, freely, to pay for good suggestions as well as the large furriers and cloakmakers.

Taking it all in all, to quote a business man, "she should be a most profitable undertaking."

FIRE ESCAPES.

WHAT TO DO WHEN CAUGHT IN A BURNING BUILDING.

Capt. McAdam Gives Some Sensible Advice to Women Who Become Demoralized at a Conflagration.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(Special Correspondence.) Wrap the rope around the body, always put one hand below and one above the rope, then slide," was the advice of Capt. McAdam in reply to my query of how to get out of a burning building.

IN THE DRILLING-ROOM.

The question was provoked by seeing a number of blue-coated firemen go speeding down a rope suspended from the sixth story of a building. They were testing fire escapes, and their ease and confidence made me wonder what some of this level headedness couldn't be imparted to women—or men either, for that matter—in cases of emergency.

So I went inside the great, admirably kept drilling-rooms and interviewed the captain.

"Well," he said, "you can preach to women about the way to use ropes and fire escapes, but when a person is scared out of her senses you can't expect her to do much; what she can't do is tremble to do in time of fire."

"Why, I don't dare take a raw man and send him down from the sixth story for his trial. If I did he would never appear again. I get him 'broke in' by commanding at the first, then increasing his slide, not running him down stairs for two weeks."

"Then you don't think it silly for people to forget all common sense in time of fire?" I asked.

"Never. One realizes more than I the horrible feeling of being caught in a trap, and seems to demoralize the bravest. Women are just as brave as men for I have known a man run down stairs leaving his wife and five children, when if all of Hagenbach's animals were placed in a field and his child among them he would dash over the fence alone to its rescue."

WHAT TO DO.

"First, how to use the ropes that are placed in hotel rooms, and should be in every private residence. They are attached firmly to the wall in the window.

Should the rope be without appliances, simply drop it out of the window; then, captain, what is the best thing to do? Put a wet blanket around yourself, and run through it!"

At the piano.

"Theoretically that is fine," he answered, "but remember that it takes buckets of water to soak a blanket; and if there is not a bath tub near to accomplish this, no few pitchers are adequate. So, my suggestion is to get up in a coat, or anything woolen. This keeps out the fire and the greater danger comes from the former being inhaled."

"Should the smoke commence to fill the room, or any part of the building, drop on hands and knees, and crawl as close to the floor as possible, for the smoke goes first to the top and to the floor last, so that much time is secured. If all escape seems cut off, put on woolen clothes, hold a piece of flannel over the mouth and nose, sit down in a window and call for help. A fireman will speedily come by ways you never thought of and deliver you."

SPINE STRENGTHENING.

WHY SO MANY SCHOOL CHILDREN SUFFER.

With Weak and Crooked Backs—Watch the Positions Taken by Your Girls and Boys When Studying.

[From a Special Contributor.]

Between a faulty position in sitting and standing, and lateral curvature of the spine there seems a great gulf fixed, but those who study the secret science of a and favorable conditions must be supplied to aid the body. If not, the spinal column bends, the muscles are over-stretched, and distortion results.

The stain created by the abolishing of benches and desks, and the making many mothers anxious concerning the possible curvature in their children's spines that they have had their backs checked and these pictures carried to a doctor. This is an excellent way for the surgeons to keep informed of a growing child.

Even if no serious spinal trouble is developed from sitting badly, excessive round shoulders and badly prominent shoulder blades as a result will ruin a figure or walk for life.

Troubles that arise from faulty positions are what the medical term pain indicates.

As we are the only animal that can sit upright, the spine is the organ of nutrition, inheritance and poverty that bring about so much of the deformity in the world. These can only be remedied, the other can be averted.

Even older people, those whose backs are weak and continually "droop" when they are seated, can improve their sitting position can be remedied them manfully by a system of gymnastics. The best recommended is to lie on a lounge with the head drooping over the end; in this position use dumb-bells. It will be found to strengthen the muscles about the spine and those of the neck. Steel rings or other mechanical appliances are apt to weaken the muscles.

These curvatures are more likely in school girls than school boys; the former eat less and the back is never so strong.

The way to sleep is another anxious question with the doctors. The method of the Indian is best; flat on the back with the head to the right. This is the only way to sleep.

Nothing is so restful as this attitude, as any one will find out by spreading a rug on the floor and lying down this way an hour before dinner. In no other attitude are the muscles so completely relaxed.

TAPIOCA.

Recipes for Making Many Simple, but Delicious Dishes.

[From a Special Contributor.]

Tapioca is one of the products of the manioc, or cassava plant, and is used largely in the preparation of desserts, and as a food for invalids and children. It is inexpensive, highly wholesome and nutritious, and a great variety of delicious dishes is prepared.

TAPIOCA CREAM.

Soak in cold water for two hours two handfuls of tapioca. Drain it and beat it up with one scant teaspoon of sugar, and stir it into one quart of boiling milk. Let it boil half an hour; then cool it slightly and stir in three well-beaten eggs and any flavoring desired. Serve cold with preserved or stewed fruit.

TAPIOCA PUDDING.

Soak one cupful of tapioca several hours in tepid water; add one quart of milk, four well-beaten eggs, two-thirds of a cup of sugar and a pinch of salt; three tablespoons of flour and a pint of cream. Add the tapioca to the milk, and add the flour and the cream. Bring to a boil, stirring until it thickens. Remove from the fire and add the yolks of the eggs and the other ingredients, lastly the well-beaten whites of the eggs. Let it cool, and when cold lay spoonfuls of jelly upon the top. Serve cold.

TAPIOCA AND RICE PUDDING.

Equal quantities of rice and tapioca, say three tablespoonsfuls of each, soak for a short time in a cup of milk, four tablespoonsfuls of sugar, grated nutmeg to taste, a pinch of salt, one quart of milk. Put all together and bake in a slow oven for two hours, stirring often during the first hour.

PICCINO.

TWO DAYS IN THE LIFE OF THE ITALIAN BOY.

By Frances Hodgson Burnett.

[From a Special Contributor.]

PART V.—CHAPTER II.

It was Lady Aileen who came in amazed, browned, and rather alarmed. The girl friend who had wondered, Piccino would like his surroundings with her.

Piccino threw back his head at sight of them and batteled and shrieked still more wildly. He thought they must have come to his aid.

"Mamama! Mamaza! Aiuto!" he wailed.

"Bless me, what is the matter?" exclaimed Lady Aileen, and came toward the bath.

"He doesn't like to be washed, my lady," panted Nicholson, struggling. "He seems quite frightened."

Suddenly Lady Aileen began to laugh.

"Take him out for a moment, Nicholson," she said. "Take him out, Isabel," to the girl, her words broken with laughter. "He thinks Nicholson is drowning him. Soap and water are such unknown quantities to him that he thinks that in this proportion they mean death."

Nicholson had lifted her charge out at once, only too glad of the respite. Piccino stood wet and quaking and sobbing by the bathtub.

Lady Aileen began to take off her gloves and bracelets.

"Give me an apron," she said to Nicholson, and on having one handed to her she tied it over her dress and knelt down before her new plaything.

"Little imbecile," she said in Italian, taking hold of his wet shoulders. "No one is going to hurt you. You are only going to be made clean. You are too dirty to be touched, and the water will wash the dirt off."

Piccino only looked up at her, sobbing. At least she had taken him out of the great pool—but what did she mean by wanting his dirt removed by such appalling means?

"I am going to wash you myself," said Lady Aileen, lifting him in her strong, white arms. "Don't let me have any nonsense. If you make a noise and fight I will drown you." She was laughing, but Piccino was struck dumb with fear. She looked so tall and powerful, and such a kind lady, that he did not know what she might fed at liberty to do in her powerfulness.

"It is only a bath," said the girl Isabel, in a kind voice. "The water won't go over your head. Don't be frightened."

Lady Aileen carfully put him back in the tub.

Her white hands were so firm and steady that he felt the uselessness of a struggle. And if he fought, she might drown him. He looked up pitifully at the signora, with the encouraging face and voice, and then in the depths of anguish, and big tears rolling down his cheeks, but passive in helpless despair.

"But ah! what strange things were done to him!"

The illustrious Signora took the cake of white stuff and the big, porous thing and rubbed them together in the water, and made quantities of snow-white froth, then she rubbed her over, and over, and over, then she splashed the water over him until she washed the foam of his body, then she scrubbed him with something, then she did strange things to his ears, then she took a little brush and scrubbed his finger nails, covering it with white froth and then washing it off—then she did the same thing to his feet and rubbed them with a piece of stone.

Then she began with his head. Poor misguided little mon of matted milk, which she had to wash off with a sponge, then a cake of white stuff till it was a soft, damp ball of foam till she scrubbed and scrubbed and thrust her hands into from one's head—who would not be terrified? Suddenly he buried his face in Nicola's lap and broke into woeful weeping. "Voglio's andare a casa. Lasciammi stare con Maria e il ciuccio! (I want to go home. Let me home to Maria and the donkey!)" he cried.

"Go to sleep," she said, "and don't be a bad boy."

"Well, well, it's nearly done now," said Nicholson. "And a nice job it has been.

And what I am to put you to bed in I don't know, unless in one of her ladyship's own dressing jackets?"

"Non io andare a casa!" He wept. But Nicholson did not understand him in the least. She went and found one of the dressing jackets and brought it back to the bathroom. It was covered with rich lace and tied with ribbons; it was too big and he was lost in it, but when Nicholson bundled him up in it, and he stood with things—such as the forestier brought in their hamper. And he did not want them! Something seemed to have filled up his throat and he could not eat. . . . Piccino actually could not eat. The tears came into his eyes and he shook his head.

"Non ho fame!" (I am not hungry) he whispered. And he poked the plate away.

"I suppose he has been stuffed with cakes all day," said Nicholson. "And he is too sleepy. Good gracious, how pretty he is!"

She turned down the frilled and embroidered sheets and gave the pillows a little thump. Then she picked Piccino up again, put him into bed and covered him up. He lay among the richness, a lovely picture to look at, his eyes wide open and shining with his awe.

"Go to sleep!" she said, "and don't be a bad boy."

And then she turned out the light and walked out of the room, leaving the door a little open.

Piccino lay among the softness, his eyes power-blazing and bigger in the dark. He was so little and everything around him seemed so large and magnificent. This was the way the King's son was put to bed—bundled up in a strange garment, with lace frills tickling his ears and chin, and with big bows, and he could not hear the donkey in her stable—the donkey who must be there this very moment, because she had not been taken away, but had been bought back from Beppo. Oh, if he could hear her now—but probably—he never could get to the stable against the forestier—the strange, rich lady would never let him go back—never!

A little sobs broke from him—under Lady Aileen's dressing jacket his breast heaved piteously. He turned and buried his face upon his pillow and wept and wept.

He cried to his friend who was beginning to make little sounds in spite of himself, and he tried to smother them because he did not know what the forestier did to children who made a noise—perhaps, held them under the rushing stream of water. But just at the moment when he was trying to stifle his sobs and prevent their becoming wails a strange thing happened. The door was pushed open and some one came into the room. At least he heard a sound of feet on the floor, though he did not see any one ever when he peeped. Feet! They were not Lady Aileen's, but they were more pauperish. He held his breath to listen. They came to his bed and stopped. And then he heard something else—a soft, familiar panting. Almost as familiar as the donkey's stirring in the stable. He sat up in bed.

"Non c'è cane" (It is a dog) he cried.

And the answer was a head and a rough, dear, hairy body was beside him, while a warm, excitedly lapping, affectionate tongue caressed his face, his neck.

For in some mysterious way the lonely dog at the entrance gate had slipped his collar, and, in rushing through the house, had run past the door and had come in.

He had heard the little smothered sobs and come in at once to answer and comfort him, knowing in his dog heart that there was one who was lonely and exiled, too.

And Piccino fell upon him and caught him in his arms, dragging him close to his heart, rubbing his wet cheeks upon the rough hair, and with his hot head nestled against and pillow'd his head upon him, rescued from his loneliness and terror almost as he might have been if he had been the donkey.

He carried him into one of the wonder-rooms, he brought him glistening of it. It was all blue and was so amazing with its frills and blue flowers and lace and trimmings that he thought it must be a place where some other strange thing was to be done to him. But Nicolo only put him down on a soft place covered with lace and with some tent of lace and silk at the top of it.

He said something to him in English and went away and left him.

He sat and stared about him. Was it a place where people slept? Did the forestier lay their heads on those white things? What soft wonders that he sat on a bed? He lay down beside him at the beautiful tent and felt so lost and alone that he could almost have shouted for Maria again. If she had been there—or if he could have understood what Nicolo said, it would not have been so awful. But he was so grand and strange and Cerian!

He lay beside him, and the forestier had heard the little smothered sobs and come in at once to answer and comfort him, knowing in his dog heart that there was one who was lonely and exiled, too.

And Piccino fell upon him and caught him in his arms, dragging him close to his heart, rubbing his wet cheeks upon the rough hair, and with his hot head nestled against and pillow'd his head upon him, rescued from his loneliness and terror almost as he might have been if he had been the donkey.

One Out of Many.

Last week's yearling sale of Men's and Boys' Clothing, has come to a successful end. Unlike other houses we have advertised goods one year old for sale. We boldly announced this fact through the columns of the daily press. This style of advertising has created a great deal of comment in commercial circles, as no other mercantile institution in this section ever dared to state to the public in clear language that they were offering last season's goods, and made prices accordingly. There is not a which has not carried over goods from last season, but they are sold under the cover of new styles, thus deceiving the public. This is not our style of advertising or doing business; we believe in honest business principles. The marvelous progress and phenomenal growth of our business, has clearly shown that such methods are appreciated by the buying public.

Clothing House in this State
